Written communication is an everyday part of modern life. A pension statement in a letter, a loan approval by email, or a damage report sent by mobile app: All these options involve a large number of requirements for senders!

Errors that aren't noticed until a document reaches the customer can have very unwelcome consequences.. There could even be legal ramifications, with damage to customer confidence and company reputation.
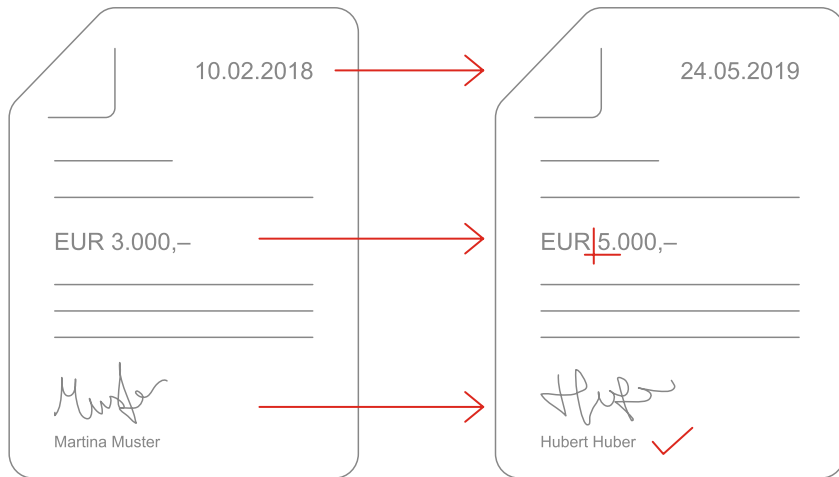

Ensuring content accuracy

The Challenge

The production of individual documents in a high-volume transactional field is a complex and expensive process. The smallest system changes, a migration, or an upgrade all carry the risk of having unintended impacts on the document. Quality assurance is essential!

However, testing is a clear cost driver. Documents are generally reviewed and controlled by people — but how to find the proverbial needle in a haystack? Manual document comparison is cost-intensive, slow, and error-prone. Furthermore, it is not practical for large-quantity applications.

The Solution

Aly document analyzer comes in at the end of your process chain, before documents go into production and distribution. Aly compares documents electronically, quickly, and precisely — ensuring that the new version compares to the reference version exactly as it should. By configuring the changes you do want, you can find the changes you don't want — simply and clearly. The pages that remain are those with changes:
